U.S. Deficits: Reagan Takes Another Look

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON - President Ronald Reagan, in appealing for support for a compromise budget to end what he termed an "immoral, dead-end course of deficit spending," struck notes Wednesday more akin to those Walter F. Mondale played last year than to those the public has become accustomed to hearing from Mr. Reagan.

The president has turned more than a oratori-cal corner. The federal budget deficits, which keep growing despite earlier assurances that the Reagan economic policies would bring them down, now worry members of the administration for the same reason they have worried Republicans as well as Democrats, conservative as well as liberal economists, and the Federal Reserve Board and foreign governments.

Some economists agree that some public rela-tions is at work in the administration's new hasis on the hazards of delicit spending. If there is a single mission of the Reagan presidency, it is shrinking the size of the govern-ment, thou balancing the budget. Otherwise, the

[The Senate called Friday for President Reagan to cancel his visit to the cemetery where 49 members of Hitler's elite Waffen SS are buried, The Associated Press reported from Washington.

The Senate, by voice vote, adopted a resolution hailing the reconciliation between the United States and West Germany 40 years after the end of World II and calling on Mr. Reagan to cancel his visit to the Bitburg cemetery. Instead, the resolution said, Mr. Reagan should visit "a symbol of German democracy."

[The 78 co-sponsors included Robert J. Dole, the Republican of Kansas who is the Senate majority leader. He said the resolution is "an expression of the Senate that we hould pay homage to the memories of the millions of civilians and the American and Allied soldiers who suffered and died at the hands of the Nazis."

Mr. Boenisch asked the 257 Republican and Democrat congressm who sent the letter to Chancellor Helmut Kohl to take note that delegates to the Bundestag, or parliament, in Bonn had voted Thursday, by 398 to 24, against dropping Bitburg from Mr. Reagan's itiner-

Triggered last autumn by televised images of starvation, a crash mobilization of food aid is now dumping mountains of grain at Ethiopian ports. For the nearly eight million people threatened by famine, there is now within this country a two-month cushion of

In outrunning the famine, however, the donor nations and the United States in particular have moved into a phase of disaster relief that is far more logistically complicated and politically confused than simply putting food before starving people.

On the logistical level, a transportation bottleneck has developed since the first of the year. Sixty percent of the 332,000 tons of food delivered here since January has not been distributed, according to a report given to donors this week. The report said that Ethiopia has fewer than half the trucks required to deliver the more than 100,000 tons of food that arrive each month at Ethiopian ports.

On the political level, strings tied to aid provided by the United States, which bankrolls one-third of the relief effort in Ethiopia, are preventing its use to help buy trucks. These restrictions also pre-vent relief agencies from using U.S. aid for any project deemed to "deelop" Ethiopia, a country whose Marxist military government con-tinues to have unfriendly relations with the United States.

In interviews this week, officials of five of the largest private relief organizations in Ethiopia — Catholic Relief Services, Lutheran World Federation, CARE, Oxfam and Save the Children — said that restrictions on the use of U.S. food and money are beginning to under-mine efforts to help Ethiopia recover from the famine.

Their frustration was echoed in interviews with Kurt Jansson, UN assistant secretary-general for emergency operations in Ethiopia, and with Maurice Strong, the senior UN official for famine relief in

For Protection From Lenders

WASHINGTON - United Press International, acknowledging that it lacks sufficient funds to cover its payroll, said Friday that its directors unanimously authorized the news service to file for protection from creditors under U.S. bankruptcy statutes.

A UPI news story Friday said there was no indication whether or when Luis G. Nogales, UPI chair-man and chief executive officer, might exercise his authority to file for reorganization under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy law.

The UPI story, quoting unidenti-fied sources, said that Mr. Nogales "promptly took steps to try to arrange coverage of current payroll checks, which a key lender had declined to honor in a move apparently aimed at forcing the company to submit to court supervision."

UPI's principal lender is Foothill Capital Corp. of Los Angeles.

The story quoted Mr. Nogales as saying that he was planning to meet Friday with officials of Foothill "to discuss resumption of credit" that had been halted Thursday.

Gorbachev Says SDI Increases Risk of War

WARSAW - Mikhail S. Gorbachev warned Friday that the Soviet Union would retaliate with a nuclear buildup if the United States persisted with plans to develop an out-er space missile defense system.

The new Soviet Communist Party leader spoke as he and the six other leaders of the Warsaw Pact renewed the East European military alliance for 20 years. Their agreement provided for a further 0-year extension in the year 2005.

He said that the U.S. Strategic Defense initiative was multiplying the risks of nuclear war. "If preparations for SDI continue, we will have no other choice than to undertake countermoves including, of course, the strengthening and up-grading of nuclear arms," he said. Saudi High Life Dries Up Along With Oil Income

New York Times Service RIYADH - It was the disposable decade, an era of such high living that little-used things could be thrown away. Furniture was replaced every six months, cars were traded in as soon as new models arrived and designer silks from rue du Faubourg St. Honoré were worn only once.

Now, for the first time, wealthy Saudi Arabi-of 10 million barrels a day only four years ago to 4 million last year. This year it will fall even lower, to 3.85 million barrels a day. The kingdom is trying to cope with the effects of a $70-billion drop in income from three years ago by canceling contracts, delaying payments, postponing and scaling back projects and slashing subsidies on everything from wheat to water. Behind the doors of Saudi villas, it is nearly impossible to judge how much the recession is hurting, in large part because outward appearances and hospitality are dear to Saudis. U.S. Expels Soviet Military Attaché

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The State Department ordered the expulsion Friday of a Soviet military attache from the United States in retaliation for the shooting death of U.S. Army major, Arthur D. Nicholson Jr., by a Soviet sentry in East Germany on March 24.

The State Department said that the assistant secretary of state for European affairs, Richard R. Burt, called in the Soviet charge d'affaires, Oleg Sokolov, and informed him that Lieutenant Colonel Stamslav I.

Gromov was being expelled and had seven days to leave the country.

A U.S. official said Colonel Gromov was selected for expulsion on the advice of the Pentagon, which described him as "very active" in collecting military information for his country. The official suggested there could be further U.S. actions against the Russians.

They threatened to do the same next week if Democrats try to seat the incumbent, Frank McCloskey, who was declared a four-vote winner over the Republican, Richard McIntyre. Republicans are pressing for a new election.

U.S. Abandons Austrian Ceremonies

VIENNA (AP) — The United States has withdrawn from two military ceremonies it had scheduled with the Russians to commemorate the end of World War II and Austrian independence, the U.S. Embassy said

An embassy spokesman said he was not authorized to comment on why the United States pulled out of the events in the provinces of Styria and Lower Austria. U.S. and Soviet military attaches had planned to meet at the former demarcation lines between their postwar occupation zones. The United States refused to send representatives to ceremonies marking the 1945 meeting of Soviet and U.S. troops on the River Elbe on Thursday because of the shooting of a U.S. Army major last month by a

Good Landing: One You Walk Away From

The Discovery space shuttle flight this month was the roughest yet for any shuttle aircraft: 123 heat-shield tiles broke, apparently during lift-off through rain, and other damage was caused when sun glare required landing in a direction without a beadwind, with a touchdown at 231 mph (372 kph), the fastest shuttle landing yet.

This made the brakes lock, which in turn blew out two tires. A hole the size of a dinner plate was burned in the tip of a wing where a landing flap ap-parently dislodged several pro-tective tiles. Robert Sieck, the shuttle launch operations director, said, "We suffered more severe damage on this landing than on any other so far."

In 1933, President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt survived an assassination attempt. Mayor Anton Cermak of Chicago was fatally wounded when the bullets went wild. A recent letter to The Washington Post suggests that the White House did not adopt stringent security measures as a result. Representative Michael D. Barnes, a Maryland Democrat, recounts that a year or so after the shooting, his father-in-law, driving with a friend on Pennsylvania Avenue in an open roadster when it started to rain, looked for a spot to put the top up.

They drove onto the White House grounds and under the portice, drawing the attention only of the butler. "A bit embarrassed," Mr. Barnes says, "they simply told the butler that they had stopped to 'pay their respects to President and Mrs. Proceeding," Seek that Mrs. Roosevelt.' Each then handed the butler his business card," and they drove off. About a week later, the congressman recounts, they "received formal invitations to an 'evening musicale' " given by the president and the first lady at the White House. "They attended and, by all accounts, it was a very pleasant evening."

LONDON — The Defense Ministry has approved the outlines of a new system of media control designed to "protect military infor-ship charges that arose during the 1982 Falklands War with Argenti-In a ministry white paper issued late Wednesday, the government rejected as not "practicable today" the recommendations of a ministry-sponsored study group. The group urged that it establish a World War II-type press censor-effect during a major conventional But in proposals that go far beyond those adopted in the same area last year by the Pentagon, the ministry accepted a recommended bargain with the media — to apply to both limited and general war under which war-front correspondents would agree in writing in advance, not to report anything the military did not want them to. In exchange, the journalists would be made, in effect, part of the military unit or operation they were covering. They would be provided with uniforms, transportation with the troops, informational briefings and assistance in transThe assumption, a defense official said Thursday, is that "the British media would be fundamentally on the side of the government and the side of the services. The media would reflect that approach and be prepared to be advised on what they should or shouldn't say." In the event that the media decide not to heed the advice, the official said, the "guidance" system would be "underpinned by the government being able to call up statutory [remedies] if necessary." Those regulations, and the way in which the British government managed press coverage of the Falklands crisis, have been the object of some envy within the Reagan administration, which had problems with the media over its restrictions of press access during its 1983 invasion of Grenada.

But media outrage, congressional pressure and First Amendment tradition have made it difficult for the U.S. administration to effect any widespread institutional changes in the way the U.S. press does business or sees its mission.

British tradition is quite different and press reaction to the white paper's proposals, which the government said will be discussed with mitting their dispatches from the the media before being carried out, was subdued.

Monograph Boosts Sale of Cartier 'Mystery Clocks'

NEW YORK — A sale of his m "Magnificent Jewels" at 1913. Christie's on Wednesday has provided spectacular evidence of the impact that art books are having on the art market.

Although diamonds accounted for an overwhelming percentage in value of the $7-million sale, it was not confined to jewelry.

There were also precious objets d'art of the art deco period, among the rarest of which were three "mystery clocks," produced by the Cartier company between the two world wars. The idea is that the mechanism of the clock should not be apparent despite the transparent casing. As Hans Nadelhoffer recounts in "Cartier, Jewelers Ex-traordinary," published last year by Harry Abrams, the idea was first pursued by French clockmakers in to the chronological chart worked the early 19th century and refined a out by Nadelhoffer; he spent a year hundred years later by Maurice researching the archives of Cartier.

Couet's invention is based on an optical illusion. The hands of the dial, made of transparent material such as rock crystal, seem to float in emptiness without any visible connection to the movement. They are actually "fixed onto a separate crystal disk with a toothed metal rim, which is driven by worm gears disguised in the frame of the case." Nadelhoffer wrote.

Couet devised three series of models: a transparent stele encasing the dial; a kind of portico with the dial attached to pillars on either side; and an animal resting on a pedestal, carrying the clock on its

The stele type was represented in Wednesday's sale by a remarkable piece drawing its ornamental devices from the neoclassical repertoire. It dates from 1919, according

A rock-crystal case standing on a white agate base appears to be entirely transparent except for the white enamel frame in front and the white enamel chapter ring off the dial, which are set in with gold motifs and Roman numerals. Rosecut diamond borders run along the frame. In the center of the dial, two hands made of rose-cut diamonds mounted on invisible metallic rods seem to float in space.

Cartier was so eager to keep the manufacturing process a secret that the mystery clocks were shown Biarritz, where the queen of tually sold in New York and not a Paris. So secretive was Cartier that, when selling in the United States, it disguised its name as "European Watch and Clock Co.." Nadel-hoffer's book reveals. On Wednesday, the stele mystery clock carrying such an inscription under the movement soared to $36,000, well above the previous highest price paid for that model, 48,000 Swiss francs, offered in Geneva in November 1979 ($29,280 at 1979 exchange rates). The sale of the stele clock paved the way for a mystery clock with an octagonal dial resting on a stand, a variation on a 1920 Cartier model. Framed by a chapter ring of black enamel and gold with applied rose-cut diamond numerals, the rockcrystal dial has two hands suspended inside. The hands, which together form a curving dragon made of small diamonds, add to the

But that was peanuts compared with the third mystery clock, an animal sculpture made in Paris in 1924. An agate chimera perched on rose quartz rockery supports the hexagonal dial. It is one of only 12 mystery clocks with animal figures made by Cartier from 1922 to 1931, according to the data culled by Nadelhoffer from Cartier's files.

Here Cartier surpassed itself. The overall effect is one of Hollywood bad taste. The 19th-century chimera from China is of yellowish-green agate, topped by an oronly to hand-picked clients. Four lished a record for any Cartier $100,000, and, indeed, the piece plates of rock crystal are sand- clock - $240,000.

Its whereabouts were unknown until February this year. During an appraisal day organized by Christie's in Miami, François Curiel, a Christie's vice president, received a call from a woman who said she owned an "old jewel clock" by "a European Watch and Clock Co." To Curiel, with Nadelhoffer's book fresh in his mind, the name rang a bell. He made an appointment at once, saw the piece with its mindboggling ornamentation, noted the fine leather fitted case typical of Cartier in those years, telephoned his New York office to get more information from Nadelhoffer's book and took the clock in for his big April auction. He delighted the seller with an estimate of $40,000.

Watercolor to Stay in U.K.

The Associated Press

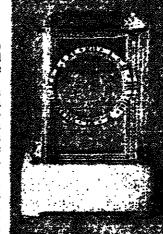

TONDON - A public appeal for money has helped raise the United States, the British Museum announced Thursday.

Stanley Moss, the New York City art dealer who bought "A Cornfield by Moonlight With the Evening Star" by Samuel Palmer, will get his money back and the painting will stay in London, the museum said. The museum launched its appeal in February after the museum said. The museum comparises contains a provide held up as government's export reviewing committee said it would hold up an export license for the painting for five months.

The 19th-century watercolor, which measures just over 7 inches by 11 inches (18 by 30 centimeters), is in the museum's exhibit of English landscape watercolors, which has attracted 100,000 visitors in 11 weeks. There has been a collection box beside it.

Half the appeal cash came from the government's National Heritage Memorial Fund and the rest from the public and the museum

"Mystery clock," 1919.

Without the wealth of information in the Cartier monograph. such a price would never have been paid for the clock. Christie's most might never have reached a New York sale room. Until the book came out, the name "European Watch and Clock Co." meant nothing, even to experts.

■ Shakespeare Folio

The first published folio of Shakespeare's plays, dated 1623, was sold Wednesday at Sotheby's for $638,000 to John Fleming, a rare book dealer, United Press International reported from New York.

The folio was one of 181 items from the library of the songwriter Paul Francis Webster, who died last year. He had bought the folio in 1965 from Fleming.

The highest price ever paid for a Shakespeare first folio was $775,000 at an auction in Paris in

Hot Springs Bathhouses Prove Source of Dispute

By Philip Shabecoff

New York Times Service

HOT SPRINGS, Arkansas —
The decaying bathhouses of this venerable resort, once glittering attractions for those seeking relief from ailments and gangsters seeking a refuge, may soon be reborn as art galleries, theaters, restaurants and fitness centers.

The ornate, labyrinthine bathhouses once drew hundreds of thousands of people a year to to try the supposedly therapeutic waters of their many hot springs. With the advent of miracle drugs, the popularity of Bathhouse Row dropped dramatically, putting all but two of the houses out of business.

The houses, the centerpiece of the Hot Springs National Park. were built by private interests on parkland. They started closing down one by one in 1962. As they were abandoned, ownership reverted to the National Park Service.

The service wants to lease them entrepreneurs for renovation and commercial use. But a dispute has erupted over who will pay the millions of dollars to restore them.

Clay Farrar Jr., a Hot Springs lawyer, heads a committee that is seeking to revitalize Bathhouse Row. He and his associates contend that the structures deterioratthe service should bear a large pean to taste the waters.

mountainside behind them. But in side are crumbling plaster, shattered glass, dangling wires, broken pipes, rusting lockers, huge tubs lying on their sides.

There are still vestiges of grandeur in the houses, particularly inside the Fordyce, the biggest of them. It is graced with stained glass skylights, etched-glass doors, mit-ble benches and fountains, maliogany dressing cubicles, elaborate tile floors and a central atrium dominated by a life-size sculpture of Hernando de Soto accepting an Indian maiden's offering of water.

Business interests in Hot Springs favor commercial use of the buildings, contending that the image of decay created by the bathhouses is a significant factor in the steep reduction in the number of tourists and in the city's economic decline.

Park service officials say there is not enough money in the Reagan administration budget, now or later, to restore the old bathhouses. Park service officials say entrepreneurs who lease the buildings.

Dutch COBRA Work in Florence

By Susan Lumsden

F LORENCE - Sixty-seven works of art on paper represent the Dutch component of COBRA, the renovatory artistic movement that sprang from the ashes of northern Europe after World War II, in an exhibition at the Dutch Institute of Art History.

At first glance, COBRA art looks like children's art and so it was, in part. Its Danish, Belgian and Dutch founders were determined to begin anew, free from the formalism that defined and confined the reigning Surrealistic art of Paris.

There, in 1948 in the case of the Hotel Notre Dame, these self-proclaimed northern "barbarians" launched their movement against formality. The Belgian artist and writer Christian Dotrement labeled it COBRA after the first letters of Copenhagen, Brussels and Amsterdam, which produced its members.

Children's art, primitive art and that of the mentally deranged was particularly cherished. Furthermore, COBRA maintained that art did not necessarily have to do with beauty. As if to prove the point, the children of the artists beloed decorate the walls of a house in Bregnerod, near Copenhagen, which was offered to Asger Jorn, the leading Danish artist of the group. Their performance was repeated in the communal COBRA house in Brussels, illuminated by the artistic personality of the Belgian Pierre Alechinsky. (Both houses have been destroyed.)

Karel Appel is the most celebrated Dutch graduate of COBRA. A retrospective of his work can be seen as well, at the Palazzo Medici-Riccardi. The 26 oils and 54 drawings from Dutch musepms and private collections map the artist's progress from neo-infantilism to Abstract Expressionism and beyond. Indeed, anyone looking for the father of neo-Expressionism in Europe could consider Appel as well as Willem de Kooning. Yet, unlike the art of the neo-Expressionists, which tends to be violent or macabre, Appel's is lively, humorous and cheerful.

"Dog" (1955) and "Wild Bird" (1956) are quintes-sential COBRA subjects, stylized in form and fused in color. Even "Cat Fighting With a Pigeon," executed in 1981, is recognizable in its COBRA origins.

"Cobra: Il Contribute Olandese, Viale Torricelli 5: "Karel Appel," Palazzo Medici-Riccardi, both through

At the opposite end of the artistic spectrum is "Masterpieces From Versailles: Three Centuries of French Portraiture" at the Palazzo Pitti.

"Napoleon Crossing the Great St. Bernard" by Jacques-Louis David is the triumphant poster painting of the show. It was one of the thousands of works of art commissioned or collected by Emperor Louis-Philippe to commemorate the "glory" of France after a bloody revolution and the Napoleonic wars. These portraits of generals, kings, queens, toyal children and court ladies were hung in the new museum created in the old royal palace at Versailles.

Shown at the National Portrait Gallery in Washington two years ago, these 50 masterpieces include some of the finest of French paintings by Ingres, Antoine-Jean Gros, Philippe de Champaigne, Charles Le Brun, Simon Vouet and Jean-Marc Nattier.

Morandi Still Lifes at Marseille Suffused With Peculiar Silence

By Michael Gibson

International Herald Tribune

MARSEILLE — Giorgio Morandi, a bulking, big-boned man, devoted his life to painting works of exquisite claustrophobia, the continuous, patient series of low-keyed still lifes that are today

While many artists then achieving fame were intent on shocking the world - a world delighted at such a prospect — Morandi's aes-thetic choice was much more intimately disturbing, as if a beloved friend whose vitality everyone admires declares one day that he intends to become a Cistercian monk. An exhibition at the Musée Cantini here assembles 138 works by Morandi from 1910, when the painter was 20 years old, to 1964, the year of his death. It includes paintings, watercolors, drawings and engravings.

Two paintings stand at the benning of the show to indicate Morandi's responses to Cubism and to "metaphysical" painting. The latter work includes a hatmaker's dummy similar to the figures in the works of de Chirico. Morandi retained something of his passage it evoked not the more obvious trappings associated with the term.

This silence was intentional in metaphysical painting. De Chirico, who disliked the Italian term natura morta, coined natura silenciosa.

MADRID — This is one of the most political cities in Europe, but when Jean Daniel, the editor of the Paris news magazine Le Nouvel Observateur, came here recently he found his political friends discussing something other than politics. The talk of the town, Daniel wrote, was the 17th-century Spanish painter Diego Velázquez. For several months, Spaniards have been slipping into the Prado Museum to rediscover one of Spain's great masterpieces, "Las Meniñas" (The Maids of Honor), painted by Velázquez in 1656.

Amid great controversy, the painting was cleaned last summer, and Spaniards are finding new wonders in it.

In "Americana," which he also directed, Carradine "so effectively communicates without words that he is a man who has survived a hell on earth that we understand he is satisfying an intense craving to cre-ate rather than to destroy," writes Kevin Thomas of the Los Angeles Times. "By the time this mesmerizing poetic fable is over, it has more than carned so sweeping a title."

"The Hit" is the story of a gang member-turned-informer whose day of reckoning finally comes. We see Willie Parker (Terence Stamp) before and after his testimony, and

His wife, Lily (Maggie Smith), has written a smashing script for a new film with no part for him. With the help of his longtime agent, Jerry Silber (Adolph Green), and the magic of a makeup man, he disguises himself as a blond, youngish Italian and lands the role. Though Italian and lands the role. Though the only writer whose name appears in the film credits is Frank Cucci, "Lily in Love" is, in fact, an updated adaptation of Ferenc Molnar's classic romantic farce, "The military aid for the Nicaraguan "contras" that was good, a blow against a misguided intervention. The House then approved a Democratic alternative designed to aid refugees and facilitate peacemaking — not so good: It put no muscle behind the call to negotiate. Then, having meanwhile rejected a Senate-approved plan (which was accepted by the administration) for nonmilitary aid to the contras, the House threw out that same Democratic alternative, 303-123. Democrats wished to derail any legislative vehicle the president might later try to commandeer, Republicans were mad at the Democrats. Thus did Congress kill the administration's policy and offer no substitute: the new Nicaragua unpolicy.

What now? Under the congressional heavings a workable policy may be struggling to be born. Let us hope so. Congress opposes military intervention, proxy or direct. On this issue there is a real gap, yet President Reagan has no wise choice except to rule out intervention. But there is only marginal congressional favor for the Sandinists' internal order and there is much distrust of their pro-Cuban and pro-Soviet orientation. Congress rightly bridled at the use of force, when means short of force had not been used against a regime with which the United States is not at war. Surely Congress is ready to support other means now. What needs to be done is to organize the nonmilitary means and to establish reasonable

First the House of Representatives rejected ends to which to apply them. The instruments should include a further economic squeeze; its effect could be substantial, since the United States is Nicaragua's top trading partner. As the prospect of military intervention fades, it should become progressively easier to enlist other Latin Americans in economic sanctions and in political pressures designed to exact a price for the Sandinists' failure to honor the pledges of phiralism and nonalignment they made to the hemisphere in return for help in ousting the Somoza dictatorship in 1979. These pressures could include condemnation and diplomatic isolation.

They should be applied first to obtaining a cease-fire — a merciful mission, given that Congress has now cut off the contras from their basic source of military aid. In conditions of a cease-fire, the Contadora regional peace effort becomes at once more feasible.

The second goal should be to induce the Sandinists to open up a dialogue with the opposition, as the Salvadoran government has done even while the Salvadoran insurgents are still fighting. Contadora has a direct relevance here too. American-Nicaraguan negotiations can be used to promote a dialogue of Nicaraguans and to advance the Contadora talks.

The Reagan administration is stung by the defeat of its military option in Congress. But a new American consensus is there waiting to be formed, if the administration will take a hand. - THE WASHINGTON POST.

Reagan: 'Tiger' on Deficits

President Reagan's budget speech Thursday was a sharp and effective attack on the mismanagement by that fellow in the White House, whom he never named. The question, Mr. Reagan declared, is whether the country can compel its government "to end the dangerous addiction to deficit spending and finally live within its means." Right! The United States, he said, cannot "stay on the immoral, dead-end course of deficit spending." How true! If only Mr. Reagan had been elected in 1980, things would be different. Mr. Reagan is a tiger on deficit spending and, if he were in charge, you can be sure there would be no huge deficit to strain and distort the economy.

We pause here for a deep sigh and a return to reality. Since the late 1960s, Republican presidents have fallen repeatedly into the habit of speaking about deficits as though they were in the opposition. The reason is simple. The spending programs are popular, and deficits produce the kind of temporary boom that is very helpful in winning elections. But good conservatives cannot approve of them, and the recent Republican presidents have usually resolved the dilemma by pretending that someone else must be doing these dreadful things. The fastest increase in social benefits in American history was not in the New Deal or the Great Society, but in the Nixon-Ford period of the early 1970s. Nondefense spending this year will be higher, both in dollars and as a proportion of gross national product, than it was when Jimmy Carter left office in 1981.

Speaking of spending cuts, Mr. Reagan earnestly said: "One area we will not touch, however, is the safety net for needy Americans." Really? Mr. Reagan was advocating a cut of 2 percent a year, for the next three years, in the purchasing power of Social Security benefits. If that goes into effect, the Congressional Budget Office estimates, about 650,000 people will fall below the poverty line. There seems to be a hole in the safety net.

But Mr. Reagan is right when he says the deficits are a serious threat. They result from the excessive 1981 tax cut. The deficits speeded up the economy, pulling it out of recession and producing a wave of prosperity for last year's election. But as they continue they will generate either much higher interest rates or much higher inflation. Spending cuts alone cannot control the deficits. Higher taxes are needed.

Mr. Reagan seems at last to sense serious trouble ahead. That is a good sign. But he is evidently not yet ready to deal with it in ways that are either fair or effective.

The controversy began on the last election night when the incumbent Democrat, Frank McCloskey, finished 72 votes abead of his Republican challenger, Richard McIntyre. After a recount put Mr. McIntyre ahead, Indiana's secretary of state certified him the winner. But the House, controlled by Democrats who were suspicious of the state recount, refused to seat Mr. McIntyre and ordered another recount under the direction of a special task force. That tally, completed last week, gave Controversy over Indiana's 8th Congressio-recounts have been hopelessly tainted by the lines to exclude dozens of absentee ballots for technical reasons. Yet it allowed other absentee ballots with the same flaw to be counted.

One need not agree that Democrats have "raped" the Constitution, as some Republicans put it, to appreciate that Mr. McCloskey's "victory" now is no more convincing than Mr. McIntyre's was earlier. While there is no guarantee a new election would not be just as close, it should be possible to ensure against another bungled vote count. Ground rules to assure the integrity of both balloting and counting could be worked out in advance by local authorities and representatives of the House. The decision Mr. McCloskey the victory by four votes.

Reagan: Lame but Not Immobile

President Reagan is said to be a lame duck: But such a bird can still fly high, far and fast, and he is not ready for a duck shoot. He has great political strengths, for he owes nothing to 1988's electoral politics: His obligations are now to his own sense of place in history. His commitments of principle — for example to preventing the evolution of the Managua regime into a model of Soviet-Cuban socialism can be expressed with a clarity denied other politicians making electoral calculations.

President Reagan has, moreover, a direct line to Americans: That, above all, was shown by last November's results. This week's votes are not irreversible nor (given the willingness of the House to arm the president with trade and diplomatic sanctions against Managua) irredeemable. Members of the House and some senators who face the polls next year stand vulnerable to a full, convincing expression by the president to the people of foreign policy imperatives in Nicaragua and else-where. Congress has not wholly grasped that. - The Times (London).

1910: U.S. Vice President Hails Tariff 1935: France Inaugurates Television ST. LOUIS - Mr. James S. Sherman, Vice President of the United States, addressing the Citizens' Industrial Association here, strongly supported the new tariff law. He declared that the protectionist policy would never be abandoned; the new law was working better than its framers had believed it would. Mr. Sherman said: "It is a revenue getting tariff, for it will probably wipe out the deficit in the first year." He pointed out that, on the other hand, the imports for the past eight months of the fiscal year exceeded by over $200 million those of the previous year and stated that nine-tenths of these imports could be made in America. He would not say that any American industries had been injured, but he asked if it would not he well to examine these increased imports.

PARIS — Television was inaugurated in France [on April 26] when a distinguished assembly, including postal, radio and state officials, wireless experts, photographers and newspaper men gathered at the post office headquarters in the Rue de Grenelle to see the first photographs flashed through space. "Marvelous!" was the word on everyone's lips after the experiment, which all agreed was successful. The first picture transmitted was that of Beatrice Bretty, a member of the Comedie-Française troupe which recently visited Italy. A Chance to Narrow the Gap in Geneva

N EW YORK — The complex arms control talks taking place in Geneva recessed this week with little to show for six weeks of delicate negotiation. Despite the diffi-culties, however, I believe that conditions for reaching a major agreement are far better now than

COPPLE CONTROL OF A PARTY OF THE PARTY OF TH

There can be little doubt that future historians will look to the early 1970s as a period of lost opportunities in Soviet-American relations. What was lost was nothing less than a chance to reverse the inexorable cycle of the arms race and achieve significant cuts in U.S. and Soviet nuclear arsenals.

Why was this chance lost? I see three primary reasons. First, the United States entered into détente from a position of weakness. It was engaged in the Vietnam War, which by that time Americans knew they could not win. In pursaing detente, Washington hoped to make Moscow help it wind down the war while preserving American honor and international standing. The United States was ready to recognize Soviet-American strategic parity and promised to treat the Soviet Union as an equal global power.

Second, this American weakness abroad was magnified manyfold by the Watergate crisis. The isolationist "Vietnam syndrome" combined with an unprecedented decline of the power and credibility of the executive to leave American foreign and security policies in a state of virtual paralysis. Third, whatever the Russians' plans and expectations when they entered into détente in 1972, their reaction to America's weakness was clear. The Kremlin decided to continue its strategic and theater military build-up almost unilaterally. It saw little risk in its or its proxies' involvement in Ethiopia, Angola, South Yemen, the southern African "frontline" states and Afghanistan. and it sought to expand its sphere of influence at U.S. expense. The Kremlin decided it could kick

America when America was down. The inevitable American reaction was not long in coming. From the last two years of the Carter administration, but particularly during the first Reagan term, America started to rearm. America became again a credible and activist force.

By Seweryn Bialer

Where does this leave us? In a United States is much more power-sense, the passage of time has made ful than it was in the ignominious a major arms control agreement even more difficult than before. The danger of the 1970s still remains that arms negotiations and partial arms control agreements will not stop the exponential growth of the two superpowers' nuclear arsenals.

And the asymmetries that make arms control accords intrinsically difficult - the asymmetry in the Soviet and American nuclear forces and in their geopolitical situations -have if anything increased during the last 10 years of futile negotiations and non-negotiations.

Yet the Geneva negotiations have a much greater chance of success than the negotiations of the 1970s. Today, both sides clearly hope to achieve a comprehensive agreement that would include all aspects of the existing and planned strategic and theater systems and would result in radical arms reductions on both 1970s. America has shown that it can increase its military expenditures and match any likely Soviet buildup. It has resumed mitiatives in the international arena: It is again an activist power, but one pered on the congressional side by the Vietnam experience. It is in the forefront of the new industrial revolution of electronics, working from a basically strong economic position. The leaders of both political parties now show the will to increase the risk and costs of any Soviet adventurism.

The Atlantic alliance has survived the crucial political test that companied the deployment of American Pershing-2 and cruise missiles in Europe. The continuing détente between Western Europe and Moscow does not compensate the Russians for their unsettled relations with Washington, China is able to consolidate his power much faster than Nikita S. Khrushchev and Leonid I. Brezhnev were able to do. He may also have the power to impose his views on arms control, even on those vested interests that oppose them. In this, he may benefit from the fact that the Soviet armed forces are being led by second-rank military professionals.

All of this argues for a major opportunity to make an arms deal with the Kremlin. American leverage over Soviet Union was never as great as it is today. But this oppor-tunity will be lost if America repeats the mistake that Moscow made in the 1970s: It must not kick the Russians in their time of trouble.

One sure way to ruin the opportunity would be to make President Reagan's "star wars" initiative a non-negotiable item. If, on the other hand, it were negotiable, in the present situation - a correlation of forces favoring America — a moratorium on its testing and develop-ment could be traded for radical, sides. This is as it should be: The Geneva talks should not shy away from partial agreements of the kind sought in the 1970s, but they must be regarded as steps to a compre-hensive arms reduction accord.

America is being given a second chance to achieve the three key goals of arms control: to deny either power the capability to launch a "first strike," to build stability into the Soviet-American strategic balance and to establish a balance hased on finite deterrence -on the minimum forces necessary to deter the other side.

This second chance exists primarily because the correlation of forces is far more favorable to the nonwas in the 1970s. The balance of military power has not changed perceptibly, yet the taking decisive steps toward modernization, posing a new strategic threat for Moscow. Japan has decided to add political power to its economic might, even as it slowly increases military spending.

The Soviet Union finds itself in a deep domestic crisis. This is fundamentally an economic crisis, but it has political, social, ideological, cultural and psychological expressions as well. In the international arena, the Soviet Union is retrenching: It is overextended and short of the resources necessary for an ambitions foreign policy.

The new leader in the Kremlin, who knows that the strength of foreign and security policies starts at home, would prefer to concentrate on his country's internal ills. In today's emergency conditions, Mikhail S. Gorbachev will probably be balanced cuts in Soviet and American offensive arsenals. Sensitivity to common security interests is required. The Russians have to be convinced by U.S. pro-posals in Geneva that they have more to gain from a radical arms agreement than from an unrestricted spiral of the arms race. The U.S. side, in turn, must be convinced by the Russians.

Let us not blow the second chance of a meaningful arms pact.
America's renewed strength is welcomed by everybody in the free world. But America's strength must be tempered by a knowledge of its limits and concern for mankind.

Bitburg, 1985: The Damage Is Done, a Lesson Remains

P ARIS—The damage has already been done by the incredible mishandling of President Reagan's trip to West Germany next week. German-American relations were fine and did not require any special, flashy gestures. But in the era of TV politics, men who should be primarily concerned with statesmanship apparently cannot resist stagemanship. Now the trouble is rubbing off on all concerned, not only the president itt but on Chancelloi mut Kohl, who also looks bumbly and poorly informed. His spokesman has said it will hurt relations if Mr. Reagan does not go to the Bitburg cemetery after so much talk. The German public cannot understand what the fuss is about, and the Americans cannot understand how the Germans could fail to understand.

This is the price of trying to ignore history. The past can be overcome with new friendships and alliances, but it cannot be swept away.

Mr. Kohl made the first mistake with his disingenuous complaint at being left out of D-Day celebrations last year. But there was no reason to veil the fact that Germany was the enemy 40 years ago, and that it was defeated in the horrible war it launched with such enthusiasm.

There were German victims of the Nazis, most but not all of them Jews. It is wrong, however, to encourage Germans now to suppose they were "liberated" in 1945 and that the evil that was done died with their defeat. That reply should have been made clearly to Mr. Kohl.

The letter from the floor leader of his party in the Bundestag to Senator Howard M. Metzenbaum, who originated a petition signed by 53 U.S. senators asking Mr. Reagan not to go to the Bitburg cemetery, is symptom-atic of the bad thinking that comes from trying to refashion history.

The floor leader, Alfred Dregger noted that he had fought the Russians in World War II and his brother had died on the Eastern front. He said, "When you demand that your president leave off his noble gesture
... I must take this as an insult to my brother and his fallen comrades.

Does Mr. Dregger think that be-cause the United States and Soviet Union are adversaries now, Americans approve of the German invasion of 1941 and the monstrous treatment of Russians, while only deploring By Flora Lewis

If the world's leaders ignore this, especially the leaders of free countries, they can only be driven by events. The mess in preparing Mr. Reagan's trip will have served a useful purpose after all if it brings this conclusion. It is what we do not know that can hurt us most.

Bergen-Belsen, 1945: Death and Liberation

This was excerpted from a broadcast by Patrick Gordon-Walker, an Oxford historian and BBC commentator, about the liberation of the concentration camp that President Reagan plans to visit.

WENT to Belsen. The Wehrmacht was not A allowed near it. It was entirely guarded by SS men and women. The first night of liberty, many hundreds of people died of joy. Next day some men of the [British] Yeomanry arrived. The people crowded around them, kissing their hands and feet — and dving from weakness.

Corpses in every state of decay were lying around, piled up on top of each other in heaps. One woman came up to a soldier who was guarding the milk store and doling the milk out to children, and begged for milk for her baby. The man took the baby and saw that it had been dead for days, black in the face and that it had been dead for days, black in the face and shriveled up. The woman went on begging for milk. So he poured some on the dead lips. The mother then started to croon with joy and carried the baby off in triumph. She stumbled and fell dead in a few yards. About 35,000 corpses were reckoned.... The SS men were driven and pushed along and made to ride on top of the loaded corpses and then shovel them into the great mass open graves. The SS women were made to cook and carry heavy loads. The inmates said that they were more cruel and brutal than the men. They are all young, in their 20s. There was no water, nothing but roots and some boiled stinking carrots, enough for a few hundred people. Men and women had fought for these raw roots.

There are three main classes in the camp. The healthy, who have managed to keep themselves decent, but nearly all of these had typinus. Then there were the sick, who were more or less cared for by their friends. Then there was the vast underworld that had lost all self-respect, crawling around in rags, living in abominable squalor, defecating in the compound.

often mad or half mad.... Over and over again I was told the same story. The parades at which people were picked out arbitrarily for the gas chambers and the crematorium, where many were burned alive. Life and death was a question of pure chance. . . .

"My father and mother were burned. My sister was burned." This is what you hear all the time. . . . A story of Auschwitz was told to me by Helen - and her last name she didn't remember. She was a Czechoslovak. When the women were given the chance to go and work elsewhere in the work zones like Hamburg, mothers with children were, in fact, given the choice between their lives and their children's. Children could not be taken along. Many preferred to stay with their children and face certain death. Some decided to leave their children. But it got around amongst the 6-year-old children that if they were left there they would at once be gassed. There were terrible scenes between children and their mothers. One child was so angry that though the mother changed her mind and stayed and died, the child would not talk to her. . . .

None of this is propaganda. This is the plain and simple truth.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dresden Was Not Dachau Regarding the opinion column "When History Forbids a Fair Hearing" (April 22) by V.W. Hughes:

The basic flaw in Mr. Hughes's argument is the contention that World War II was no different than any other war. The Nazis were not just lighting a war. World War II was the extension outside of its national territory of the Nazi regime's policy

Dresden, Hiroshima and Dachau are not the same, as Mr. Hughes believes. We were horrified by the bombing of cities like Dresden and Hiroshima, as by the conduct of the German army in Belgium. As usual, he had a story from Texas to embellish his argument. It was of a cowboy who saved all year to buy a bottle of whiskey and a string of firecrackers and consumed both on New Year's Eve.

"I worked like hell to get to be president," Mr. Johnson said, "and I don't want to set it all off at once." Now, LBJ never laid claim to charisma of the kind that Mr. Reagan can rightly lay claim to. So we will have to wait and see whether Mr. Reagan is the exception to a well-recognized rule. What can be said with certainty is that Mr. Reagan's recent handling of the money for the contras was in clear violation of the Johnson Doctrine.

TOKYO — For Issey Miyake, the goal is freedom, for Kansai Yamamoto it is happiness, for Hanae Mori it is feminimity and for Rei Kawakubo it is all an inexplicable abstraction.

That is what Japanese fashion design is about —but not completely. It is also a rich amalgam of tradition, cross-cultural influences, craftsmanship, innovation and experimentation, and it is much more than a passing fad in the fickle world of fashion.

When the so-called New Wave designers, with their enormous unstructured masses of textured fabrics in black, blued-black and gray and white, captured the imagination and the headlines a few seasons ago, a shock wave was sent through the regulated ranks of international ready-to-wear,

In numbers too large to be overlooked and with a the retailers started to buy —and sell these complicated clothes at prices estimated to be 200 to 250 percent higher than those in Japan.

Everyone watched and waited. Sales waxed and then waned as the ever-changing mood of fashion moved on to other subjects. As a result, some observers dismissed the importance of this event, but others have pointed out the general influence it has had on the entire fashion scene. Designers in Europe and the United States started loosening up, cutting more ample shapes and even giving the Japanese credit for their interiories.

If Japanese fashion design were simply the New Wave group, perhaps it could be considered of limited interest, but that would discredit the brilliance of Issey Miyake, the sustained elegance of Hanae Mori, the fresh exuberance of Kansai Yamamoto and Kenzo look too surprising to be ignored, they hit the Paris Takada or the trendy turns of Suco Irie, formerly an runways and, in the beginning at least, gave the blase chroniclers of la mode something to talk about. Then not a one-dimensional industry.

As Akira Mori, associate publisher of Women's their clothes are often colorful and so is absolutely crazy, but it's exciting." Many of the most recently successful designers take their success for granted. The next couple of years will be selective and only a few will last."

Hanae Mori, the doyenne of Japanese fashion, is credited with being not only an excellent designer with a glittering international following, but also a remark-ably magnanimous woman who has throughout her career helped and promoted new talent. She is optimistic about the future of Japanese design.

"We are now seeing the birth of the 'fourth genera-tion' of designers," she said. "They are very different from the third generation, or New Wave group." (Miss Mori considers herself the first generation and Miyake, Kenzo, Yamamoto and Mitsuhiro Matsuda, among others, the second generation.)

"These young men and and women of the fourth generation are more relaxed; they don't take themselves so seriously," she said. "They have great humor, not part of life to always be at the peak."

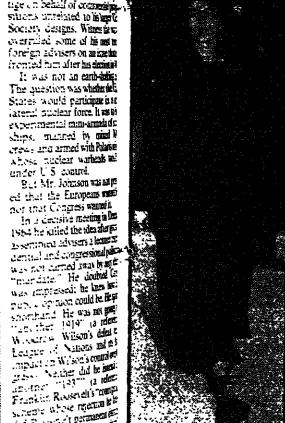

their clothes are often colorful and some of their work

Some of the fourth-generation names to watch include Atsuro Tayama, whose A.T. label can be found in the United States and Australia, Kensho Abe, Noriko Kazuki, Yoshio Ishikawa, Akiko Sakaizumi, Takayuki Mori, Yoshiki Hishinuma and Karsuhiko Kamisaki. Others are Mariko Aimi, who has a New York-based company that sells under the label Mariko; Nobuo Ikeda, whose line is available at 250 stores around the world, including top U.S. retailers; Masaru Amano and Chisato Tsumori

As the debate over the lasting importance of Japanese fashion continues, the prediction is that there are more surprises to come — from all the generations. Besigner and high priestess of the New Wave, sagely puts it: "The course of one's life is peaks and valleys -

And the fell with the second of the second o WASHINGTON - When the Japanese collections led off the weeklong ready-to-wear showings in Paris on a Thursday last month, the audience was dressed largely in black and gray oversized raincoats to cope with the bleak weather. On the runway, the clothes of designers Rei Kawakubo for Comme des Garçons and Yohji Yamamoto were rather slim, in identifiable shapes, often in color and wonderful prints. The models even wore lipsuck.

Power land the way of the control of Control Section 19 Control Secti The Japanese designers had changed. But the rest of the fashion business had changed, too, greatly influenced by Japanese designers. "The Japanese invasion gave the whole fashion industry a welcome shot in the arm," said the respected Tobe Report, a weekly publication for retailers, recently. The Japanese influence goes beyond their use of black and gray and inventiveness with fabric. "Their introduction of knotting A Company of Ball (6) and tying, their use of draping and twisting fabrics to define or ignore the body, their use of uneven hemlines, all have left a strong impression on the current fashion scene." the current fashion scene."

Kawakubo's shapes were far less abstract and more identifiable than in the past, including splendid jackets and pleated international contractions jumpers and introducing acid colors in man-made fibers.

Larrier Land let Yohji Yamamoto's lean coats, high-rise skirts and pattern mixes emerged as important looks from his collection, which had the effect of being very Dickensian from the overscale hats and swallow-tail coats, askew collars and assymetrical wraps that showed up throughout. And to show that he could make clothes that did not engulf the body he moved his clothes much closer to the body for [all. He kept his jackets and costs voluminous, but those inings worn underneath fit closer to the body. One of his new fabrics, a stretch flannel, helped acheive this skinny look.

They discuss color and silhouette and fabric. They are the only ones who bother to ask." He finds the Japanese smartest about price. "They've never raised their prices, where others, as they get the hype or press of being new and grand and desirable they get on their pedestal, and you can watch the prices go up as the designers think about their new apartments.

"Their prices are not out of hand. You can still feel the value of the clothes and the individuality because of fabric or print design or color. Customers recognize it and say: I know it, I want it. You never hear anyone say the Japanese clothes are not worth the price." Gene Pressman, executive vice president of Barney's in New York criticizes the press for making heroes of Japanese and other designers one day, discarding them the next.

"Fashion is a people business that relies on talents," he said. "And while Japanese fashion was a phenomenon that came by storm, that influenced the world market heavily and is now in a slight decline, it will always be valid. One doesn't lose talent right away."

Pressman also uses the talents of Japanese fabric makers and manufacturers for his private-label business and buys accessories and clothes by young Japanese designers in Tokyo.

Ann Ball, divisional merchandise manager for Neiman Marcus, said: The Japanese, such as Issey Miyake and Yohji Yamamoto and Matsuda, offer a strong alternative to the typically ultra-feminine and rather precise (ashion of Europe. They may be best understood by an intellectual minority ... but for us it offers new shapes, new fabrics and new attitudes that we don't otherwise see. The fact that they are Japanese is

Rather than making obvious fashion swings with the usual season changes as most designers do, the Japanese move gradually. "It is a clear case of fashion moving at its own pace, not necessarily to the wishes of the critics involved," she said.

Bilzerian is not worried that these occasional changes are moving Japanese designers more toward Western style. The two will never be the Japanese, says that Japanese fashion, in maturing, has worked to adapt

NEW YORK.—Japanese New Wave designers burst upon the fashion world two years ago in a blaze of glory that was hailed by press and retailers as the greatest thing since Yves Saint Laurent. Some fashion people even started wearing the baggy black clothing. Stores bought neavily, advertised heavily and waited for the customer But something happened between the racks in the stores and the racks The American public looked at the somber gray and black garments with tattered edges, designed-in moth holes, confusing shapes and inflated prices, dubbed them "rags" and ran scared.

The word went out: The new look had bombed.

But is it really true? Have the clothes disappeared from the stores and the streets of America? Yes and no. First, the Japanese designers have influenced other designers on both sides of the Atlantic in one significant way: Clothes have become bigger and looser and more comfortable. The big shirts and oversize jackets that are the hot look this spring may not bear Japanese labels, but they can be traced directly back to the oversize clothes showed by such designers as Yohii Yamamoto. Second, Japanese designers' clothes have been simplified and cleaned up (no more tatters) and some of them actually come in colors other than black. Many of them are not instantly identifiable as Japanese, as they ere two years ago. Also, stores are no longer lumping the designers together under the

"I don't think the Japanese influence is called Japanese anymore," says Ellin Saltzman, fashion director of Saks Fifth Avenue, "We had a Japanese boutique in 1983, but now the merchandise is scattered throughout the store. It's not thought of as Japanese specifically because it now fits in with other merchandise. Though I do think the Japanese were responsible for the current interest in comfortable, oversize clothing." Saks is still carrying four Japanese designers who have stood the test of time, she said. They are Issey Miyake, Yohji Yamamoto, Kansai Yamamoto and Matsuda.

Those names, along with Rei Kawakubo for Comme des Garçons, are the ones that have emerged on top of the heap, Kenzo, who works in Paris and has been around so long he is considered French rather than Japanese, now has his own shop on Madison Avenue. So does Matsuda, who is opening a second shop on Park Avenue later this year.

Bergdorf Goodman, which had not been on the Japanese bandwagon in 1983, opened a department for Issey Miyake last year. Henri Bendel still carries Comme des Garçons, which has developed a following of its own. And the Comme des Garçons shop in New York's Solito is highly successful, according to its owner, Dianne Benson.

"I felt a backlash against Japanese fashion last spring," Benson said.
"What was the vanguard of everything was suddenly the nadir of everything. I felt a refuctance from our clientele. But now Comme des Garçons is booming and my Miyake business is just like it used to be." One of the reasons for the popularity of the Comme des Garçons spring collection, she said, is that it is easy to understand. "Every garment has two arms, a place to put your head and your feet." All thos panels and sleeves on the earlier Japanese clothes did put off quite a few potential customers, who could not figure out how to wear them. Benson has two other boutiques in New York called Dianne B., one on Madison Avenue, the other in SoHo. Her first store, the one on Madison Avenue, has been selling Issey Miyake and Kansai all along.

"I recently did a study for my accountant," Benson said, "and discovered that the Japanese portion of my business has been steadily between 35 and 45 percent for nine years."

Selma Weiser of the Charivari shops in New York said her sales of Japanese fashion doubled last year over 1983.

She has been selling Issey Miyake since she found him in Paris in 1974, she said. "I thought he was the world's greatest designer. I discovered Yohji three or four years ago and took an initial big position on him." Her stores still carry both designers, and she now goes to Japan gularly to find lesser-known lines. When Bloomingdale's announced a Japanese promotion for last fall, many observers felt that the timing was not exactly propitious. But according to Kalman Ruttenstein, store vice president and fashion director, "The customer surprised us, and the Japanese clothing sold very well, especially Yohji, Comme des Garçons and Matsuda. "Once the Japanese fashions got over the period when they were ragged and tattered," he added, "the customer discovered that they were comfortable and great to own. They realized that they didn't have to wear the look from head to toe but could just buy individual pieces and wear them with their other clothes. Our sales have gone consistently up.

Dianne Benson pretty much summed up the feeling of retailers today: "Now that nothing is being said about Japanese fashion, everything that is good and positive about it is restating itself."

Western Retailers Meet with Success

By Terry Trucco

TOKYO - in recent years, Japanese designers have opened boutiques everywhere from San Fran-pan. "Japanese have very high sewcisco to Sydney and large Japanese retailers have also gained a toehold abroad, notably in the United States. But big-name foreign firms are just as eagerly setting up shop are made in Japan.

in Japan. Some of these companies lease space in large department stores. The new Seibu store in Tokyo's Ginza district contains outposts of Van Cleef and Arpel, Hermes, Yves Saint Laurent and even Sotheby's, all on one gilt-edged floor.

More and more international names in retailing are making a bigger investment here and launching their own free-standing stores. In the Ginza district alone, the stylish foreign line-up includes Louis Vuitton, Laura Ashley, Dunhill, Gucci, Chanel and New York clothiers Paul Stuart. And the ranks are growing rapidly in other parts of Tokyo and Japan, spurred by Japan's keen interest in upscale goods.

Foreign retailers have discovered what the Japanese already know: The best way to establish an image and a presence in Japan is through a carefully decorated store that sells nothing but the company line. Such elements have gained importance as Japanese shoppers grow more selective. A decade ago, a foreign name was often sufficient to make a sale, but Japan is now "saturated with foreign clothing brands," as one retailer put it. Japanese shoppers also tend to gravi-tate to whatever is new, then lose interest. Foreign companies in particular are vulnerable.

Indeed, the most successful foreign retailers in Japan deal in high quality or the unusual and have an appealing image. Many also have learned to blend elements of East and West

The line is also edited for local taste. Missing from the spring collection were a two-piece printed dress, deemed too sheer, and a cool white cotton article too vast for most Japanese. Because brides here are usually unattended. Ashley's ty dresses.

Several quirks in the Japanese market have further modified what foreign retailers sell. Styles that appeal to broad age brackets in America and Europe sell to much narrower groups in Japan. "Laura Ashley says her clothes are for ages 3 to 80, but in Japan they will probably sell to women in their 20s and 30s," Nakayama said.

The trend is even stronger in menswear. Both Paul Stuart and Brooks Brothers have much younger customers in Japan than in the United States. But each is hopeful the market will expand as today's 25-year-olds mature. "Middle-aged Japanese men still don't under men are becoming more knowledgeable and concerned with what they wear," said Brooks Brothers' in women's wear, there is much difference between the New York and Tokyo Paul Stuart stores. American customers tend to be career women who need tailored suits and dresses for the office. In Japan, sales are mainly to office ladies, or "O.L.s," as they are called, i.e. young unmarried women who wear company uniforms by day and preppy styles after work. Once married, they will probably shop elsewhere.

Despite such differences, it is easy to see the Japanese market's attractions. Japan has a large popuname garments is fading, it is far from dead. A Japanese store also adds cachet for an international

'Perfect Models' Come to Paris Runways

By Nancy Beth Jackson

. v 24 %...

PARIS — Japanese mannequins are a model agent's dream; prompt, hard-working, meticulously made-up and professional at every turn.

That is why Jean-François Guillé manager of Guilla, manager of Glamour modeling agency in Paris, has no problems placing these "perfect models," as he calls them, on the runways of top designers.

Jean-Louis Scherrer, with an Oriental theme to his fall/winter collection, was a major employer during the recent ready-to-wear showings, where one-third of his 15 models were Japanese. "It depends on the collection. There are Asian tendencies this year," said a man for Schemer.

Herbert de Givenchy has at least one Japanese model in his shows and sometimes two or three, no matter what mood he wants to set. He likes their bodies -no hips, no bust, very skinny - and has a special affection for Japan and its art. He used his first Japanese models in Paris in 1980 and two years ago celebrated his 40th anniversary in fashion by staging a retrospective in Tokyo in which 48 of the 52 models were Japanese.

Monsieur Givenchy likes very thin legs, not much hip, very sveit, very fine," said his press spokes-yman, Max Michel Grand, "And ev-erything about a Japanese model is perfect — the makeup, the dressing at a show. If Monsieur Givenchy has them wear a dress with a bow, they make the bow tidy, perfect. American or European models are not always like this, unfortunate-

Japanese models come to Paris as house models for Japanese designers, through cooperation be-tween Paris and Tokyo agencies, with their agent-husbands or just "pop in" an agency to ask about work. Modeling in Europe pays less than in Tokyo, Guille said, but ex-perience in Paris and Milan enances value back home.

Ruth Malka, booking director of Karen modeling agency, said the market for Japanese models in Par-is started when designers were looking for "exotic types like blacks, Japanese and brunettes" for their shows. Although some apanese models have moved into print, they are usually called upon only for a layout requiring a special Oriental look, she said,

Some of the so-called Japanese models in Paris are of Japanese ancestry, but of another nationality. One model flown in for last month's ready-to-wear collections was a Japanese-American.

They send me everyone who is Oriental," said Maryvonne Numeta of Issey Miyake's Europe of-Mishiko, one of Hubert de Givenchy's favorite models.

Japanese models on French runways are as tall and willowy as their Occidental sisters in the trade. Minimum height is almost 5 feet 10 inches (about 178 centimeters). The stature often comes through an American father or grandfather. Although mixed blood has encountered prejudice in the closely knit Japanese society, in fashion the exotic mix is an asset. In the world of international modeling the blend of black or white American features with the Japanese gives a broader appeal.

The trend among Japanese mod-els is what Malka calls "the girls in "When they arrive here, they know the street," with little makenp and how to move," he said.

much natural appeal. Issey Miyake discovered his latest favorite, with her pretty adolescent face and boy's body, operating an elevator in a Tokyo department store.

For Japanese models, French haute couture is a vacation since they work only a few hours a day, a few days a week. In the Tokyo collections, they work from 8 A.M. to 8 P.M. in the showroom as well as on the runway and are fined a day's pay if they do not turn up for work, says Guillé.

But practice makes perfect.

Although most designers and agents see no difference in how the models move in the shows, Maryvonne Numata saw a "very obvious difference" in a recent Issey

"One Japanese model between two Americans and there is no difference, but put a group of Japa-nese together and they move a lot differently, a lot smoother, more like No theater," she said, adding that perhaps that was the effect sought by the art director.

Off the runway in Paris, Japanese models tend to live together, maintaining a Japanese life-style, Few speak either French or En-glish, the languages most often heard among models. They have the reputation in the business for not only being industrious, but also fastidious. Of the 25 apartments the Glamour agency maintains for models, the Japanese are always given the cleanest.

"They wouldn't stay in them otherwise," Guillé said.

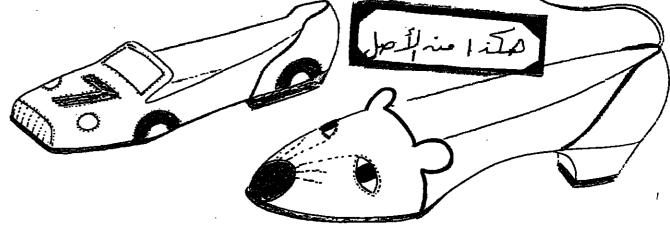

When the first Japanese models began showing up in Europe about six years ago and the popularity of Japanese designers swelled, predictions were made the models would soon be everywhere, but they have remained a novelty. Some designers, such as Nina Ricci, would never consider hiring them; the house prefers traditional blue-eyed blondes,

"In France, we are very conservative about the look," Malka said. Glamour, which handles many "exotic" models, reports that 90 percent are American, 8 percent are European and only 2 percent Japa-nese. (All of the Japanese models

Despite their professionalism and a gentle aging that allows them longer careers, few Japanese mannequins have become regulars in Paris, although Mishiko, a favorite among several top designers, has worked several seasons for Givenchy.

Japanese models "won't take over Paris," Numata says. Even Japanese designers only use a few of their countrywomen in Paris shows - and not because it is cheaper to hire locally. Japanese designers use blondes because they do not want to present themselves as "Japanese" designers, she be-

"Miyake doesn't consider himself a Japanese designer," she said. "He designs for everyone and his inspiration is worldwide. Sometimes a collection is toward Africa, sometimes India. He is not so interested in saying let's have some Jap-anese or black models. He is more interested in the character of the girls. His clothes are very strong and the girls have to come alive in Kumagai's designs, priced from 700 francs to 1,500 francs (about 578 to $167), may be whimsical, but they are finding their way onto an increasing number of international feet - and not only the young.

Kumagai is virtually alone as a Japanese designer creating accessories. "We don't have a tradition of accessories in Japan," he said. His own entree into shoe design came by chance after spending 10 years in Italy as a stylist for various fashion houses. "In 1975, Fiorucci gave me carte-blanche and I designed basketball shoes in silver or gold for evening," he recalls. They were a smash hit, widely copied, and Kumagai was launched on a new career in shoes.

is what sets me apart from the others," he says. "Half the collection is created in the sense of the current fashion collections. For example, my flat, masculine style shoes go with the present look. The other half of the fine is pure creativity: shoes designed as objects to give total freedom of how they are to be worn to those who buy them.

"Some clients buy shoes as accessories to go with their clothes. Others choose a dress to go with their shoes. I wanted to overthrow the stereotype that shoes must always come second, as an accessory to an outfit."

For evening, he always shows high heels. "Stiletto heels have the same effect on women as a tie does on men. They affect how they place their feet, how they walk. High heels give a woman a more feminine silhouette. Women now work like men. That's good, but from time to time they need to feel more feminine, to bring out and wear their jewelry. We don't want that to disappear.

Inspiration is drawn from sources as varied as art exhibitions, movies or even passages from a novel. The surrealist show at the Pompidou Museum in Paris produced shoes decorated with a single eye, the imprint of a mouth and a series of trompe l'oeil hand-painted faux marbles, simulated woods and newsprint. Others resemble the action painting of Jackson Pollock.

A description of a girl wearing realized that "no one looks at the numbers surprises even Kumagai. "I never thought the 'eye' shoe would sell," he says, "but it did very well." His imaginative collections provide a new dimension for those women who love collecting shoes. "Many women, like Diana Vreeland, for example, possess more than 200 pairs of shoes. They wear them, but they take very good care of them."

The true collector's stamp of approval came one day when Kumagai noticed an elegant gentleman studying a window display of shoes based on a Kandinsky exhibition. "He came in and bought a pair without asking the size," Kumagai recalls. "When I asked him why, he told me he collected Kandinsky, and he was going to display my shoe in front of one of his paint-tures meet and synthesize. That is the spirit of the future - the new life-style."

He cites Issey Mivake as most epitomizing this Japanese ap-proach to fashion. "He has completely assimulated the cultures of the East and West - from Africa to New York. He wasn't content just to remain a conturier. With him, art became couture. He has opened a new path in design."

Kumagai himself dresses in the low-key blacks and grays so associ-ated with the Japanese, although he maintains he is looking forward, as an old man with white hair, to dressing in a "pale pink jacket with a light yellow tie." His personal footgear is a pair of black Addidas. He smiles when taxed with this seeming anomaly.

"In France, they say pastry cooks never eat pastries. In Japan, the saying goes 'fabric dyers are always dressed in white.' You would be surprised how many stylists are badly dressed."

But in his case, he puts it down to the "creativity gap. When I am designing something, I really want to have it. But when it is finished, I want something else, and so move

Yet the "nose" behind one of the most ontstanding of the recent crop of new French perfumes, the "Parfum d'Hermès," launched by the luxury Faubourg Saint Honoré store, is elegant, feminine - and Japanese. For Akiko Kamei of the fra-

But fundamentally "there is no reason anyin moderate trading.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which rose 6.29 Thursday, was off 9.6 to 1,275.18 at the Declines led advances by a 4-3 margin.

Volume amounted to about 86.6 million shares, down from 108.63 million Thursday.
Despite its earlier advances, some analysts were skeptical about the market's ability to sustain an upward drive. "The stock market is beginning to sense a renewed uncertainty" about Federal Reserve action and legislation on the federal deficit, said Eugene Peroni of Bateman Eichler, Hill Richards in Los Angeles.

The market has "mounted a pretty good foundation here for gains, but it still lacks any particular fire power," he said.

There is an uncomfortable disparity, he noted, in the leadership, with most emphasis on special-situation stocks. Until the market sees more leadership particularly in the high-technology sector — the market will continue to go up only cautiously and be more vulnerable to retreat, he said. The market still looks promising, said Alfred Goldman, of A.G. Edwards & Sons, St. Louis. He said the intermittent rally begun earlier this week could eventually take the market to retest the 1,300 level. But the lack of quality leadership, and the emphasis on "crap-shooting merger mania — fact or fiction" is a problem, he said. Friday's early lows were caused by normal

Jobless Rate Troubles West German Analysts

SATURDAY-SUNDAY, APRIL 27-28, 1985

By LEONARD SILK New York Times Service

RANKFURT -- West German economists are troubled about the failure of the current recovery to generate more jobs. With strong demand for its exports, especially from the United States, the German manufacturing industry grew by 3½ percent in 1984, nearly one-third faster than the German economy as a whole.

But German economists think it unlikely that industries here will again outperform the rest of the economy in 1985. The German expansion, in their view, is unlikely to exceed 2½ percent - too slow a pace to reduce unemployment.

The jobless rate in West Germany averaged 8.3 percent last year — about four times as high as in the earlier postwar period.

There is nothing unique about the German jobless situation in the European context. Economists at the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development expect unemployment throughout Europe to average

Il percent this year. The
OECD countries of Europe

They are worried now have 20 million out of work, compared with 10 mil-lion in 1979 and 5 million in 1970. For all the OECD counirs, including the United tralia and New Zealand, as well as the European countries, unemployment is 32 million, compared with 18.6 million in 1979 and 11 million in 1970. The European economists are worried that if the recovery does not break the long trend to higher enemployment, confidence in the kind of policy their countries have been following will erode.

They are worried that confidence in their countries could be undermined

Two main issues concern them. The first is whether high real interest rates, the strong dollar and the unbalanced trade position, with the United States in deep deficit and Japan and the Europeans in high surplus, can be sustained much longer. They are anxious about the shock that a major change in the structure of interest rates, capital flows and trade balances might yield to German economists are asking how long the United States can go on borrowing in excess of its domestic savings to finance its level of public and private consumption.

HILE growth prospects seem unlikely to bring down unemployment significantly, there is much uncertainty on how to spur more rapid growth without regenerating inflationary expectations. The European economists, observing the more rapid growth of jobs in the United States, are looking hopefully at supply-side solutions; ways of accelerating technological change to create new jobs, to increase the rate of invest-ment, to create greater flexibility in labor markets and to reduce disincentives for productivity.

Jean-Claude Paye, secretary-general of the OECD, said recently that empirical evidence of past periods of intensive technologi-cal innovation shows that even though technology-induced gains in productivity may have led to the elimination of many jobs in certain sectors, these have been more than compensated by the growth of demand and by the emergence of new opportunities for work elsewhere in the economy.

However, he added, using a phrase invented by the late Professor Joseph Schumpeter of Flarvard, this "creative destruc-tion" of jobs at a time of high unemployment is perceived by many as being possibly troublesome for two reasons.

"First," he said, "there is little evidence that job creation will occur without time lags or in a painless and automatic manner. Second, considerable employment diversion will take place. In other words, there is every likelihood that part of the employment created by the current wave of technological innovation will not

Ford Posts Decline

Ford Motor Co.'s first-quarter profits declined by 12.7 percent to $783.3 million from the $897.2 million reported in the first quarter of 1984 because of heavy taxes, com-pany officials said Friday.

Net income per share declined 14.3 percent to $4.20 a share from $4.90 a year before, but worldwide sales increased 1.5 percent to $13.2 billion from $13 billion a year ago.

Ford set aside about $527 million in taxes for the quarter after it used up all investment tax credits and carryforwards, said Tony Fredo, a spokesman. On a pretax basis, the No. 2 antomaker earned a record $1.3 billion, $18 million

Turkey Awards Contract

Industries, Nippon Kokan and Ishikawajima-

-Harima Heavy Industries of Japan and Im-preglio of Italy received the $551.3 million con-

They were the lowest bidders. All bidders had to supply foreign credits to cover construction to be eligible.

Apart from the bridge, the contract includes construction of around 300 kilometers (180 miles) of highways on both sides of the Bos-

Four other consortia had bid for the contract. They included Cleveland Bridge of Britain, which constructed the first bridge over the Bosphorous, with Bechtel Corp. of United States

McDonnell Douglas Earnings Increase

ST. LOUIS — McDonnell Douglas Corp. said Friday that earnings rose 35.8 percent to $91.7 million, or $2.28 per share, in the first quarter of 1984, from $67.5 million, or $1.69 per share, in the like quarter last year.

Sales in the quarter were $2.7 billion, up from $2 billion in the first three months of 1984. The 1985 first-quarter earnings include a one-time gain of approximately $10 million after taxes; or 25 cents per share, from the sale of land in El Segundo, California.

said it had concluded that the 10 exporters were found either not to have sold the products at below the production cost or to have done so at extremely low volumes. The products involved were pure titanium sheets or strips used in the chemical and tubing industries and titanium alloys used in aerospace.

The giant defense contractor said its combat aircraft and transport aircraft segments both had ingher earnings in this year's first quarter than in the comparable period of 1934, primarly because of increased volume.

Claudius Dornier's intention to exercise that option presents a potentially insurmountable obstacle to Daimler's stated desire to win full "majority control" of West Germany's second-largest Daimler is understood to have agreed to pay just under 400 mil-lion DM for the proposed 68-percent holding.

Mr. Dornier said Friday that Daimler already indicated during negotiations with family members Monday and Tuesday in Stuttgart that a 25-percent holding for Claudius was not acceptable. A Daimler spokesman would not say Friday whether Mr. Dornier's proposal for a 75-percent share would be rejecta 25-percent share would be reject-

Mr. Dornier also said he was skentical that the Daimler plan would meet with the required approval by the trustees of the 27.8percent stake in the estate of Anna Dornier, the founder's deceased year-round.

He said that he had the support of all but one family member to family with 60 percent and an outside partner, or partners, with 40

Phillips Posts 45.1% Drop in Profit; Tenneco Earnings Plunge 59.4%

The Associated Press NEW YORK — Phillips Petroleum Co., citing the cost of a restructuring it undertook to escape from two hostile takeover bids, said Friday that earnings tumbled 45.1 percent in the first quarter of 1985 from a year earlier. And Tenneco Inc., a diversified energy company, said its profit plunged 59.4 percent, due largely to a 75-day shutdown of production at its JI Case Co. subsidiary, a move aimed at reducing excess dealer inventories of farm equipment. The company predicted that Case, which purchased International Harvester Co.'s farm equipment business late last year, would turn a profit by the end of 1985.

Phillips said that its first-quarter profit fell to $106 million, or 71 cents a share, from $193 million, or $1.26 a share, in the like period a year earlier. Revenue edged up 1.5 percent, however, to $4.02 billion from $3.96 billion. William C. Douce, Phillips' chairman, said that earnings were reduced by $40 million for expenses related to a restructuring of the company that was developed to settle separate takeover attempts by T, Boone Pickens and Carl C. Icahn. Phillips borrowed $4.5 billion to buy back nearly half of its stock and agreed to sell $2 billion of its assets to reduce the new debt load.

Tenneco said that profit fell to $63 million, or 34 cents a share, from $155 million, or $1 a share. Revenue fell 4.1 percent to $3.72 billion

LOS ANGELES — Bell National Corp., parent of a rapidly growing California thrift institution that invested heavily in Silicon Valley real estate in the last three years, has reported a loss of about $60 million in the fourth quarter.

According to Bell's chairman, Miles A. Cobb, the loss for all of 1984 was about $47 million. He said Thursday that it all but wiped out the net worth of the company's principal subsidiary, Bell Savings & Loan Association, which accounts for 90 percent of the par-

For all its might, United has not been without its problems in recent years. During the early years of airline deregulation, its earnings were battered by spiraling fuel bills and proving the bulls. and sagging ridership. Between 1979 and 1982, United reported more than $500 million in operat-

The issue is what policy measures the European countries can adopt to minimize the impact of "creative destruction" on jobs.

In Mr. Paye's view, the role of policy in supporting the process of technological innovation and in maximizing the gains for all should involve several elements: providing a stable environment for overal economic growth and, especially growth of investment; keeping in-ternational markets open for trade in technology and for the free flow of goods, services and knowledge; improving competition in domestic markets and promoting the adapta-tion of the labor force, especially through education and training, to new conditions, and supporting a positive social climate for technological change.

There is particular concern here for youth unemployment. Some fear that a mood of desperation that could lead to social and economic decay may develop unless bolder actions are taken to overcome the high and persistent rate of unemployment. This is a problem that now extends from Britain to virtually all parts of Western Eu-

Turner's proposed to exchange for CBS stock are so risky they could be worth nothing because they might not trade. They said that there is a multi-billion-dollar market of risky bonds that are actively traded by professional investions.

The opinion of these investment bankers that Mr. Turner's bid is financially viable was supported by a material price above the market price. This would demains the difference because that there is a multi-billion-dollar market of risky bonds that are actively traded by professional investions.

The opinion of these investment bankers that Mr. Turner's bid is financially viable was supported by a nationally prominent investion of steal that while Mr. Turner's bid is financially viable was supported by a nationally prominent investor in repurchase some of its stock at a Turner's bid, and they would be to repurchase some of its stock at a Turner's bid, and they support and

By Leonard J. Arrington. 522 pp. $24.95. Alfred A. Knopf, 201 East 40th Street, New York, N. Y. 10022.

Reviewed by Michiko Kakutani

THE second president of the Mormon Church and one of the chief colonizers of the Western frontier, Brigham Young is one of those epic 19thcentury figures who stand out in the landscape of American history like a carving on Mount Rush-more — seemingly larger than life in the magnitude of their ambition, their achievement and their controversial beliefs.

As the spiritual, political and economic leader of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints for three decades, Young effectively consolidated the movement — he oversaw the organization of several hundred settlements — and led its followers westward to realize, in the desolate, inhospitable reaches of Utah, a vision of his New Jerusalem. In doing so, he proved himself not only a charismatic religious leader but a hard-headed entrepreneur, a savvy politician and an empire builder capable of such stunning arrogance that he could view the Civil War, in his biographer's words, as 'divine retribution upon a nation" that had allowed the Mormons to be persecuted and maligned.

Leonard J. Arrington writes that his biography attempts to "steer between the extremes of, on the one hand, telling the Mormon story with Young as merely a leading personality and, on the other, recounting the life of Young without placing it Sufficiently in its proper historical setting."

As Arrington, a professor at Brigham Young University, sees him, Young embodied "the supreme American paradox, not because he contained elements foreign to American soil but because he united them - the business genius of a Rockefeller with the spiritual sensitivities of an Emerson, the lusty enjoyment of the pleasures of good living with the tenderness of a Florence Nightingale."

Unfortunately, while crammed full of facts that attest to prodigious research, this biography neither penetrates Young's public poses to reveal anything about his inner life nor dramatizes his role in the Mormon Church with any particular distinction. Rather than put the emergence of the Mormon movement in perspective with the rise of other spiritual movements in America during the 19th century, Arington tends to dwell on internecine arguments within the church, leaving the lay reader either mystified as to the nature of certain doctrines and "revelations" or bored by detailed, repetitious accounts of various missions.

No doubt Arrington has chosen to focus on such details in an attempt to be both comprehensive and objective, but his willful reluctance to interpret events or situate them within any larger context results in a baggy, plodding narrative that slurs over important issues. He does not really examine the relationship between the persecution the Mormons suffered — in the 1830s and '40s, they were driven out of Missouri and Illinois - or the so-called Mountain Meadows Massacre, in which church followers were involved in the killing of dozens of nonbelievers. He similarly fails to probe the blurring of political and religious lines during Young's tenure as territorial governor of Utah.

When it comes to the character of Young himself, Arrington is also overly cautious — and the results, again, are passages that read like a heavily footnoted scholarly report, set down in serviceable but undistinguished prose. Even the most mundane of the author's statements have the feeling of being hedged. For example: "Although Brigham could be kind to orphans, aspiring students, and helpless widows, he expected a full day's work from his employees." Or, "Although Brigham tried hard to be fair, he did not like to be taken advantage of."

Having hinted that Young experienced considerable conflict over the claims of the church and the needs of his family, Arrington skims over these matters, saying he "appears to have been a reasonably fair and generous husbanda." Even the emotionable constants and constants of plants. al consequences that the doctrine of plural marriage must have had on Young and his wives are dis-missed with phrases to the effect that "he must have held long and earnest conversations" with his first wife, Mary Ann, before going ahead with another

If Arrington's intent in treating Young so gingerly was to create a sympathetic yet balanced portrait of a controversial figure, he has somehow gone astray. About all that he has managed to do in "American Moses" is make Young - and his ac-

Friday that the company does not plan to accept a takeover offer from Jack Kent Cooke and will proceed with a recapitalization plan that will retain current company ownership.

Mr. Cooke, a Virginia businessman and owner of the Washington Redskins football team, made an unsolicited offer to buy shares outstanding of Multimedia at $63 a share and acquire the company.

"In making the proposal, Mr. Cooke did not describe his sources of financing or the conditions he would seek," Multimedia said in a statement released Friday.

There were offers earlier this year from Lorimar Productions of California at $61 a share and from investors headed by former Treasury Secretary William E. Simon at $60 a share.

The company statement said that "representatives of the founding families had informed Mr. Cooke that the founding families remain committed to the recapitalization plan which they and certain members of senior management have approved and that there was no interest in pursuing a sale of Multimedia."

"He was put up on a pedestal," said Levine. "He was somewhat naive. . . . He was not a scholar. He happened to have a sensational arm. That's all it was."

Mickey Lolich, a pitcher at the same time as McLain, wasn't surprised about his former teammate's

Michigan. "When he was on the ball team, he was suspended by the Tigers and he was suspended by the

We used to say he was either going to wind up in concrete shoes or in prison."

Atlanta General Manager John Mullen - whose team has experienced drug problems - said McLain's sentence will help base-ball in its fight against drugs. "It sure can't hurt," he said. "It's a tremendous problem throughout sports and society in general. Maybe what happened to Denny might wake a few guys up." (NYT, AP)

SPORTS BRIEFS Chief's Crown Takes Bluegrass Stakes

LEXINGTON, Kentucky (AP) - Chief's Crown prepped for the May 4 Kentucky Derby with a front-running victory in Thursday's Blue Grass Stakes at Keeneland. The 1984 2-year-old champion, unbeaten in three outings this year, covered the mile and one-eighth in 1:47-3/5, a fifth of a second off the track record.

Ridden by Don MacBeth, Chief's Crown finished five and a half lengths in front of Floating Reserve; Banner Bob was another head back and 11 lengths in front of last-place Under Orders. The track record of 1:47-2/5 was set by Round Table, under 126 pounds, in the 1957 Blue Grass and equaled by Numbered Account (119 pounds) in 1972, and Star Choice (112) last October. Chief's Crown carried 121 pounds Thursday. The starters in the 14-mile Kentucky flunked the course when he said the soldiers buried at Bitburg were just as much victims of the war as people who died in the Holocaust. What is one to make of the president's blunders? There may be clues in a book called "The Films of Ronald Reagan" by Tony Thomas (Citadel Press, 1980).

Despite his being under contract to Warner Brothers, Reagan did not play in as many World War II movies as one might think. Yet his view of the war and the Nazis could easily have been formed by the ones he did appear in. In 1941 Ronald Reagan went into action for the first time in a film titled "International Squadron." He played a daredevil American stunt pilot who ferries a bomber to the RAF in England. Once there he witnesses the death of a child in an air raid and joins the RAF to get even with the Nazis. But Reagan doesn't take his flying job seriously and while he's messing around with a French pilot's girlfriend he misses a mission. His best friend, another American, substitutes for him and is killed. This sobers him up as far as gets to meet one personally.

> After the plane drops its bombs on Germany it is shot down and the crew is rounded up by a German major (Raymond Massey). Mem-bers of the German military in "Desperate Journey" are portrayed not so much as villains as they are as bumblers and idiots. In Reagan's big scene, he is being de-briefed by the major, who thinks the Yank will tell him everything about the mission. Instead Ronnie knocks out Massey, then sits down and eats the major's breakfast.

> After this hilarious scene Reagan and the crew find it a breeze to escape and make their way across Germany, blowing up half the country with sabotage. In a slam-bang finish they manage to steal a German bomber and take off for England with Errol Flynn at the

That, as far as I know, was Ronald Reagan's only Hollywood action in the European theater during World War II. He did serve honorably in Burma in "The Hasty Heart," and in the Korean theater in an MGM film called "Prisoner of War," which was so bad that it has said that this film hastened Reagan's decision to go into politics. The future president's finest hour was "Helicats of the Navy," in which Reagan was cast as a naval commander on a sub in the Pacific who wreaks havoc on the Japanese fleet. Not only did Reagan win the war, he also won the girl, a nurse played by Nancy Davis, who is now the U.S. first lady.

I detail the films that Reagan played in for only one reason: It appears that the president's Holly-World War II is concerned. He wood war record, while distindecides to atone for his tacky be- guished, did not prepare him in any havior by knocking out the French way for the 40th anniversary of the pilot and taking his mission. After end of hostilities with Nazi Germashooting down several German ny. The important thing is that, Battle of the Bulge" would have while there is a lot of talk about made him realize that visiting a German bad guys, Reagan never military cemetery where SS soldiers are buried is not the right thing for To my knowledge the only time a U.S. president to do.

Spring in Japan Is Learn-to-Bow-Time

By Clyde Haberman New York Times Service

OKYO - This is the season when young

I Japan is taught how to bow.

The skill might not seem to require lessons. especially in a country where people bow at far more than just the drop of a hat. But there is a proper way to do everything in Japan, and that means rigorous spring training for the many thousands of young people who graduated from school in late March.

For the past few weeks the bigger companies have put their recruits through courses not only in the right way to bow but in the right way to smile, the right way to dress, the right way to walk. Young women learn the right way to serve tea, and young men the right way to present their calling cards to a new acquaintance — a ritual of immeasurable cards. able significance here.

Everyone learned the right way to talk, a less-than-breezy task because polite Japanese involves varying levels of humbleness, de-pending on whether one is speaking to a social superior, equal or inferior.

No one has had to work harder at all this than employees of department stores and banks who maintain steady contact with the public. Most such companies prepared man-uals and videotapes demonstrating proper techniques, such as the importance of keep-ing the back straight when bowing and of not bobbing one's head like a fishing float.

At the Takashimaya department store in central Tokyo one recent morning, the time had come for 32 ill-at-ease women, all just out of high school, to learn how to bow properly.

The women were divided into groups of eight, and they took turns bowing and greeting, bowing and greeting, trying to remember that at Takashirnaya one bent 30 degrees when welcoming customers and 15 degrees when encouraging them to look around. At other stores, 45-degree bows are de rigueur for departing customers.

"You look so nervous," said their instructor, Mitsuo Keuchi, a crisply dressed man recruited from the men's clothing department. "You have to smile when you say, 'Good morning."

So the young women greeted and bowed all over again, trying to get it right but not looking discernibly less nervous. They had far to go, concluded Kazuo Hoshino, who heads the store's education division.

Inevitably, many older Japanese think young people have poor manners, bowing fitfully and speaking unspeakably. Some say younger Japanese are too tall for graceful bowing; others blame lax discipline at home these days. "What I see most clearly is stooped posture — their hands hang in front of them like gorillas," said Kryonobu Ogasawara, the 72-year-old master of an etiquette school in Tokyo.

Older people everywhere tend to think that

Two young women practice bowing in Tokyo park.

youngsters are not what they ought to be, but even so, in how many other countries are manners so crucial that someone would invent a machine like the one that has been used by the Kintetsu department store in Osaka? It is a bowing machine. A person presses his or her chest against the breastplate, and in that manner the body adjusts to the desired angle, Usually, that is somewhere between 15 and 45 degrees. Deep-crouched, both-hands-touching-the-straw-mat bows are far less common.

A few years ago the bowing machine delighted foreigners, who saw it as a splendid amalgam of Japan's passion for precision and for gadgets. In reality, the machine is little used, but it does make a point as to how somberly Japanese take this ancient custom.

There may not be as much obligatory bowing as before World War II, when people made obeisances in the general direction of the Imperial Palace, but there is still enough bending to keep everyone limber.

The prime minister bows to members of the Diet, or parliament, before addressing them, and television announcers bow from behind their desks before reading the evening news. In offices, workers sometimes bow involuntarily when saying goodbye on the tele-sells maternity clothes, estimates that she bows seven to ten times for each customer. A magazine called Gendai examined bowing patterns two years ago and found that in one unnamed Ginza department store the young women who ran the elevators bowed to shoppers an average of 2,560 times a day.

In Takashimaya, Mitsuko Hitaka, who

As important as bowing for young people is the instruction they have received this spring in polite language — learning which phrase to use to show they recognize their station. This is a complicated business and a serious one, even in make-believe. The actor Toshiro Mifune, for example, refused to use language he thought unfit for the feudal lord Toranaga when he made the American mini-series "Shogun" a few years ago.

Modern youngsters do not automatically know such subtleties, said Hoshino of the Takashimaya department store. But he was confident that with perseverance his new recruits would eventually know instinctively how to bow and talk, from the opening welcome to the final "Sayonara."

On second thought, even sayonara, perhaps the one Japanese word most foreigners know. is becoming vaguely unfamiliar to young Ja-pan. It is still used, to be sure. But more and more youngsters part company by not bowing to each other and then saying in perfect
